What does the "no" mean in the question: "So do you have any suggestions for what to do next?" I would expect the answer to be "no" because of the negative words in the question, but I am thinking that the person wants to say, "I have no suggestions for what to do next". A: If someone says, "Do you have any suggestions for what to do next?" you are expected to say "No" Q: Why would an input be linked to a function or script? Some questions on specific ads on StackExchange have links within them that when you click, instead of taking you to another section of the page like a normal link, they run a function or script. Is there a reason for this or is it just a side effect of bad design? A: It's a feature of Amazon. These are affiliate links, so if the user clicks the link then they get charged a small commission. The click then gets sent through via an affiliate program, which is handled by Amazon. If you were to look at a dev tools console in a page that contained an Amazon affiliate link, you'd see a message like this: Your 79a2804d6b
