Windows 7 by Hazar crackQ: How can i use c# code (obtained from c# decompiled using dnSpy) to rewrite ASP.NET MVC views I would like to replace the Razor views in an existing ASP.NET MVC 4 solution with my own.cshtml files but I would like to avoid writing a new ASP.NET MVC solution from scratch and modify an existing solution. It seems that i can easily replace the views using a solution like that described here. The difficulty i have is that the views are in an assembly in a namespace of my own and the link on how to obtain the source code by decompiling is using a of the ASP.NET MVC web application. The only solution I could think of would be to decompile the project and obtain the source code, modify it so that i can use the custom namespaces, re-compile it and then use it in my own project. I'm not sure this is the f988f36e3a
